Help for new parents

USAG Ansbach Army Community Service offers a New Parent Support Program to help community members cope with stress, manage the demands of parenting—including single parenting—build a support network and find services in the community that can help them.

The free program is open to all parents with children 3 or younger, even if there are older children in the home.

NPSP is staffed by a licensed clinical social worker and provides one-on-one support for new parents.

The services include home visits, labor and delivery classes, parenting classes, playgroups, referrals to other resources and counseling.

For more, call 467-2516 or 09802-83-2516 in Katterbach, or 467-4752 or 09841-83-4752 in Illsheim.

Child development

Educational and developmental intervention services offers community parents early intervention services designed to support families who have concerns or questions about their infant's or toddler's development.

EDIS officials said early intervention providers can help families identify if their child has a delay through an evaluation of the child's current abilities.

If your child has a delay, your family may be eligible for early intervention services.

Customs helps guests 'drive on' while in Germany

Mannheim, Germany — One big plus of living in Germany is that friends and relatives can get that real European experience when they visit.

But, if you want to lend your car to guests so they can tour on their own, you must get customs approval first.

"Just go to your local military customs office and fill out an application form," said Bill Johnson, director of the USAREUR Customs Executive Agency. "You will need your visitors' passport numbers, so get them early."

Also, you must have clear copies of the passport and state-side (or international) driver's license valid for Germany if your relatives or friends are not there to fill out the form with you.

One key provision is that your guests have not established and will not establish residency in Germany. It is also very important that your automobile insurance covers your guests.

Consult the customs Web site at <http://www.hqusareur.army.mil/opm/custom3.htm> for more details and customs office locations.

Your guests can use this exception to policy to drive a USAREUR-registered POV in Germany for up to 90 days after arrival in Europe. The document must be in the car when your guests use your vehicle independently, along with their passports, the vehicle registration, proof of insurance and their international driver's licenses (or official translations of their stateside licenses).

"Driving in Germany is tax and duty-free for U.S. Forces personnel and their dependents," Johnson explained.

Your guests are not normally allowed this exemption, which is why the customs authorization is required.

However, he warned that it does not allow them to use your gas coupons or buy gas at AAFES stations.

Additionally, guests of U.S. Forces personnel who rent a car are likewise not authorized gas coupons or use of AAFES stations.

Your guests can have a great European vacation if you plan ahead. Call any military customs office or the Customs Hot Line (DSN 381-7610 / CIV 0621-7307610) to find out more.
